Kahua for Higher Education

Universities and colleges across North America are responsible for providing and maintaining state-of-the-art campuses for students and faculty. The capital programs that higher education institutions are responsible for include campus expansions, ongoing maintenance and repairs, and delivering innovative learning spaces for a competitive edge – ultimately leading to increased enrollment and funding. This is a heavy lift while having to contend with increased regulation, budget constraints, small teams and multiple funding sources.

Kahua for Higher Education is the only PMIS with higher education, specifically in mind.

The Kahua for Education platform is making a significant impact on our higher education institutions, enabling them to manage capital programs efficiently and effectively. From scope and cost to time, quality and objectives, universities and colleges can efficiently manage the entire construction lifecycle of programs with an eye toward building spaces strategically designed for students and faculty.

Keep Time Sensitive Projects on Schedule

Identify potential setbacks, avoid risks, and prepare for changes to ensure your project is complete before the semester starts.
